

An Open Letter to the Jewish People

When one builds a tall skyscraper, it is of utmost importance to have a sturdy and impenetrable foundation. If there is a flaw in the foundation, it is reflective in the higher stories of the building. To solidify, one must strengthen the foundation with retaining rods.

So to, in a person's journey through life, he is building a solid foundation of positive commandments, Torah learning and a correction of character traits. At some point in life, opportunities will be presented, it depends how valuable and important the knowledge is to the person. How much effort is the person willing to give for G-d and the truth, putting it above his personal desires of this world?