

What One's Heart and Mind Must Do

When one is praising G-d in prayer, they should pay strong attention to their words. Eventually, their heart and mind will catch on and a person will take honest and upright actions. Super success cannot be guaranteed, however, one must exert their share of effort. Even if one's business colleagues conduct themselves in a dishonest manner, a person should remain upright. G-d will ensure that the person will live a life at a decent standard. If one has a desire to overbreed, it will inevitably lead to over spending and the teaching of rot to your children. One should invest their spare time in spirituality; G-d is surprisingly happy with even the seemingly minuet efforts.

The success in spirituality is small, small deeds with rich intent. One may get frustrated in learning but should consistently try with steadfast perseverance to enrich himself, thereby, the Almighty will help him. One should not look for excuses not to try or deny improving. For instance, such an error would be one's lack of recognition of G-d's good to the Jewish People. One should inquire as to how much they owe to G-d. They should mitigate the complaining and blaming on G-d for their own wrong doing. People may befriend a person and they will be denied the good that they did. In turn a person may come to deny the good of G-d, this is an inestimable sin. One should be positive with each other and G-d will inculcate blessing.
